

Too Extreme for Me Campus Tour

Fall 2023

The WHY:

Every year, Virginia undergoes an election, opening up a chance for abortion extremism to make its way back into Virginia politics. This November, we again face that chance. 7 in 10 Americans want limits on abortion. It's imperative that we elect leaders who will stand for Life in law. The goal of this display is to educate and mobilize voters to register to vote against abortion extremism: <https://www.elections.virginia.gov/registration/>

Talking Points and Sources:

- In 2019, an extreme Virginia delegate proposed a bill that would allow abortion up until birth, that same week she proposed a bill to protect endangered butterflies. After learning more about the bill, 22 of the co-sponsors publicly repudiated their sponsorship.
- A fetus can feel pain at 15 weeks and that a preborn child is viable around 22 weeks of pregnancy. Learn more about fetal development here.
- Former Governor Northam once callously talked about infanticide:
 - “The infant would be delivered...[and] would be resuscitated IF that’s what the mother and the family desired.”
- Regardless of your position on abortion, infanticide should be universally agreed upon as wrong.
- In the short time that pro-abortion legislators had a majority in office, they went against 78% of Americans by making abortion legal after a fetus can feel pain.
- A fetus can feel pain at 15 weeks and that a preborn child is viable around 22 weeks of pregnancy. Learn more about fetal development here.
- In Virginia, former Governor Northam and VA lawmakers voted to repeal health and safety standards such as an ultrasound requirement and waiting period before having an abortion in 2020. They also advocated for non-physicians to perform abortions.
- Women deserve laws that protect their informed consent and that hold abortion facilities to at least the same standards as nail salons (in New York, nail salons are inspected more than abortion facilities). Inspections and safety standards matter as they protect women from serious injury and/or death. In Pennsylvania, abortionist Kermit Gosnell was convicted of killing a woman through medical malpractice. His clinic was uninspected for 17 years.
- Bottom Line: If these laws/positions are too extreme for you, tell your legislators with your vote.

- Pro-abortion legislators pass laws that hurt women and preborn children and repeal laws that protect them.
- Vote for legislators that oppose abortion extremism. Encourage people to commit to voting against abortion extremism at TooExtremeForMe.org.
